Beyond Physical Abuse:

Understanding, screening for and intervening with domestic violence in your clients: A training for mental health and substance abuse professionals

This FREE one day, six hour training, will provide a brief overview of domestic violence and its common features, how to effectively screen for this in your adult clients, and what to do for your clients who are in an abusive relationship, either as a victim or as a perpetrator. CEU's pending.

About the trainer:

Chris Huffine, Psy.D., licensed psychologist, is the Executive Director of Allies in Change, nonprofit organization in Portland that offers approximately two dozen groups a week for abusive men as well as groups for women who have been abusive. Dr. Huffine's experience includes providing individual and couples counseling with adults on a variety of issues including mood disorders, stress management, relationship/intimacy issues, and addictions. He has extensive experience facilitating domestic violence intervention groups for abusive men, as well as counseling female and male victims of abuse. He speaks on a wide variety of domestic violence issues, serves as an adjunct professor at Portland State University, and offers a graduate level class on domestic violence at Pacific University. He also serves on the statewide domestic violence fatality review team and on the advisory group to the state Attorney General to monitor standards for batterer intervention programs.
