This webinar will guide fatality review teams in identifying, defining, and documenting prevention outcomes. It will address the types of prevention and outcome data collected in the Pediatric NFR-CRS, define outcomes, and address challenges in correlating the efforts of CDR and FIMR teams to prevention outcomes achieved. The session will also showcase the National Center's new approach to capturing aggregate prevention outcomes. The key audience for this webinar includes CDR coordinators, FIMR coordinators, and fatality review team members.

Speaker Biographies

Gabby Hillers, MPH

Gabby is a Senior Data Analyst with the National Center. She works on special projects around pediatric disaster mortality surveillance and a pilot project for enhanced water-related death scene investigations. She holds a master's in public health from the University of Florida and Bachelor's in Community Health as well as Cultural Anthropology from Western Washington University.

Susanna Joy, MA

Susanna Joy is a Program Advisor and the FIMR Lead at the National Center for Fatality Review and Prevention. In this role, she provides technical assistance (TA) to fatality review teams, provides facilitation support, and coordinates FIMR and maternal child health-specific activities and engagement. Prior to coming to the National Center in 2017, Mrs. Joy coordinated the FIMR network for the state of Michigan and worked on Michigan's Pregnancy Risk Assessment Monitoring System. She supports CDR and FIMR teams in catalyzing community and data-driven change to make their communities safer places to be born, learn, and grow.

Josh Thomas

Josh is a Senior Project Coordinator at the National Center, where he provides technical assistance, collaborates with national partners, and supports the use of evidence-based frameworks to address gaps in health outcomes. Before joining the National Center, Josh served as the Director of the Child Abuse Death Review Unit at the Florida Department of Health and as Florida's CDR Coordinator. He has a Bachelor of Science in Criminology from Florida State University and a Certificate in Public Health Executive Leadership from the University of South Florida.
