

FREE Health Literacy Workshop

hosted by the Allied Health Programs at PCC

- Why: According to the American Medical Association, "poor health literacy is a stronger predictor of a person's health than age, income, employment status, education level, and race"
- Where: Portland Community College
Cascade Campus, MAHB Auditorium
- When: November, 22nd 2013
12:00pm – 2:00pm
- Who: Lisa Isabell is a Certified Wellness Coach and Staff Trainer with Kaiser Permanente
- What: "As a result of this program, the participant will be able to describe the impact of health literacy on the lives of patients and the medical system. Participants will be able to identify ways to make the healthcare environment a shame-free environment. Participants will be able to offer and exchange health information in an effective way that encourages partition"

This is a free event and is open to the public. Light snacks will be provided by the Medical Assisting Program.

Note: CMA (AAMA) continuing education credits available. For more information, please contact Virginia Chambers at 971-722-2544 or Virginia.chambers@pcc.edu
