This institute will provide staff of health departments, community-based organizations, and other community partners in the Western Region of the U.S. with knowledge of how structural interventions operate to address the environmental, social, and economic factors that influence individual risk and protective behaviors.

Presentations will include examples of structural interventions currently, or recently, implemented in the U.S. that have improved health outcomes related to HIV prevention and care. In addition, participants will have an opportunity to network with their regional peers on implementing structural interventions that are aligned with the National HIV/AIDS Strategy and the Ending the HIV Epidemic in the U.S. initiative. Participants of this Institute will leave with increased understanding of how they can implement structural interventions in their local health jurisdictions.
