Suggestions for Other Resources

Learning Express Test Prep for AP/PSAT/SAT/ACT/TOEFL
None that I can think of, but then, I am technologically challenged.
I still like Learning Express. I guess that is #7. Never mind.
The Oregonian[] []
Language Learning - resources to help a patron learn another language.
Statewide Ancestry and Heritage Quest subscriptions?
Genealogy; Directory (such as Reference USA), automotive and small engine repair Selection specifically geared toward middle readers so they don't have to wade through college level academics data.
Peer reviewed literary criticism/analysis
Auto Repair [] Genealogy
Automotive repair databases would be widely used throughout the state, if offered.
Genealogy; Automotive repair, especially Mitchell On Demand; Investment, such as Morningstar.
Local/Regional historical information.
Languages
None that i can think of at this time
streaming video collections
Language learning[] Auto repair
Learn a language, Reader's advisory Consumer ratings.
language learning
Children's-leveled research databases, particularly Science-related and History-related and biographies that will be useful for students doing Common Core research.
I wish we had something like "Readers Guide Retrospective"
Ancestry.com would be great for public libraries.
Genealogy
Databases with practical applications rate high on the list for me - Automotive repair, Mango Languages, Learning Express.
If not included in existing categories, a database like Mango Languages is most essential.

More biographical sources? Full-text Oregonian? State and country resources (such as Culturegrams)?
Language learning
Resources on issues with global viewpoints, i.e. Gale's Global Issues in Context. This resource is rich in content with non-U.S. perspective. Provides primary sources, academic journals, reference, and more.
Can't think of any others.
Language learning tools (such as Mango)
I'm hoping something like Mango or Rosetta Stone would be covered - Would you class something like that under Career Job and Computer Skills?
A streaming video library would greatly enhance our ability to deliver differentiated materials focused on Common Core State Standards.
Online reader's advisory tool
All of the above resources are so relevant to the curriculum at our school.
World Religions[]
Supreme Court Cases[]
American Foreign Policy
language training, Chilton's Automotive
Languages[]
Genealogy
Language, auto repair
Reader's Advisory such as Novelist
Streaming audio and video databases and/or licensing; Image databases.
Do-It-Yourself materials
Audiobooks
DIY-type databases (e.g., auto and/or small engine repair; crafts, home improvement).
Language learning software[]
Statistical works such as Statistical Abstract of the United States small business support materials - for business plans, market and demographic research, etc Car repair, poetry, musical scores audiobooks would be useful
Health topics are frequently needed.
Electronic Reference materials for Medical, such as PDR, diagnosis coding, and translating medical dictionaries for English to Spanish and Spanish to English, Russian, and other languages.
I would like to see practical use online resources for the collection:[]
Consumer Reports[]
Investment (Valueline, Morningstar, S&P)[]
Language Learning (Mango, et.al.)[]
Online Classes (ed2go)
Image database for copyright compliant images.
Education; business resources
Language Learning
Full access to reference works is important. I notice that current access to Consumer Reports via the statewide catalog seems to be a very shortened version without full automotive information that I am used to.

Consumer Information
Business and consumer directory with demographic info. (e.g., Ref USA or Gale's Demographics Now)
None that come to mind
Consumer Reports.
