

Organizational Capacity Building July 27-28, 2016 in Seattle, WA

In this interactive training, CAC organization leaders will delve deeply into the concept of nonprofit business models, learn to assess the strengths and weaknesses of their own business model, and explore strategies for building a nonprofit organization that is both highly effective and financially sustainable. We will also delve into the human side of sustainability - how CAC leaders can ensure that they and their employees can balance professional needs with self-renewal over the long haul. Participants will also learn strategies for building an effective plan to respond to crisis situations.

About the Instructors

Scott Schaffer, Principal, Public Interest Management Group, Seattle, WA. Scott is a nonprofit sector veteran with over twenty years' senior leadership experience and a track record of orchestrating turnarounds, engineering mergers and strategic alliances, and helping organizations achieve sustainability. The focus of PIMG is creating powerful business plans, designing efficient organizational structures, and crafting strategies to ensure both mission and financial success.

Maureen Fitzgerald, Project Director, Western Regional CAC. With over 30 years experience working within the nonprofit and public sectors, Maureen has extensive experience with developing and sustaining organizational capacities. A former CAC director and Chapter director, she is also especially equipped to understand the intricacies of maintaining a successful CAC organization.
